At the telephonic conference on these matters, counsel sought additional guidance regarding the level of specificity required by the Court for the “Factual Contentions Underlying Claims/Defenses” section of the pre-trial order form. As noted by counsel, the parties’ factual contentions have been thoroughly briefed in earlier filings. Therefore, the Court directs that, in lieu of “factual contentions,” the parties should include in this section a statement of the case to be read to the jury. While the Court strongly urges the parties to agree on a joint statement of the case, if such is impossible, each party should submit their proposed statement of the case here.
